

Editorial Board

After five years since its founding, ESTS has an all new transnational editorship for another five years, starting in 2021.

The Editorial Collective

Editor-in-Chief
Aalok Khandekar
Hyderabad, India

Aalok Khandekar is an assistant professor of Anthropology/ Sociology at the Indian Institute of Technology, India. As part of the Cool Infrastructures consortium, his current research examines how marginalized residents in the urban global South are adopting to rising temperatures in their cities. Khandekar was lead curator of the STS Across Borders and Innovating STS exhibits at the 2018 and 2019 4S annual meetings and is a founding member of the Transnational STS and TransAsiaSTS networks.

Website
Twitter

Associate Editor
Duygu Kaşdoğan
İzmir, Turkey

Duygu Kaşdoğan is assistant professor of Urbanization and Environmental Problems in the Department of Political Science and Public Administration at İzmir Katip Çelebi University, Turkey. She received her doctoral degree in Science and Technology Studies Program at York University, Canada. She is the founding member of IstanbulLab and Transnational STS Network, and council member in 4S since September 2019. Her research focuses on democratization of science, transnational collaboration, political ecology of disasters, toxicity governance, and bioeconomies.

Website
Twitter

Associate Editor
Angela Okune
San Francisco, United States of America

Angela Okune studies research data practices and infrastructures in Nairobi, Kenya to explore questions of equity, knowledge production and open science in Africa. She is completing her doctorate in the Department of Anthropology at the University of California, Irvine in 2021. Angela provided strategic guidance for the growth of tech research in Kenya as co-founder of iHub Research (2010–2015). Angela is co-editor of the open-access book Contextualizing Openness (2019).

Website
Twitter

Website

Associate Editor
Ali Kenner
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, United States of America

Ali Kenner is an associate professor in the Department of Politics and the Center for Science, Technology, and Society at Drexel University. Her current research focuses on energy justice in the U.S. Mid-Atlantic region, and the tensions between sustainable transitions and energy vulnerability. Kenner is the author of Breathtaking: Asthma Care in a Time of Climate Change (2018) and a member of Climate Ready Philly.

Website
Twitter
Google Scholar

Associate Editor
Emily York
Virginia, United States of America

Emily York is an assistant professor in the School of Integrated Sciences at James Madison University, a public institution in Virginia. Integrating STS research and teaching into STEM spaces is a key emphasis of her practice and intellectual inquiry. Her research focuses on STS pedagogy, interdisciplinary collaboration, critical participation, responsible innovation, and future-making within high tech innovation and higher education. She is a founder and co-director of the STS Futures Lab.

Faculty Profile
STS Futures Lab

Associate Editor
Noela Invernizzi
Curitiba, Brazil

Noela Invernizzi is a Uruguayan anthropologist with a PhD in Science and Technology Policy (State University of Campinas, Brazil). She is a full professor at the Education Sector and the Public Policy Graduate Program of the Federal University of Parana, in Brazil. Her research interests include the effects of industrial innovation for workers' skills and employment conditions; science, technology, and innovation policies; the development of nanotechnology in Latin American countries, and the practices and politics of academic science evaluation.

Website

Managing Editor
Amanda Windle
London, United Kingdom

Amanda Windle has an academic background and an editorial portfolio including ESTS and the Interactions magazine. Her PhD in design and STS led to research focusing on feminisms and the digital design of online technologies. At present her latest interests bridge transnational disaster and disability. Windle is an honorary psychotherapist at the Guild (London), chair of the Simon Community London, 4S council member, and author of A Companion of Feminisms for Digital Design and Spherology (2019).

Website
Twitter

Associate Editor
Grant Jun Otsuki
Wellington, New Zealand

Grant is a lecturer in cultural anthropology at Victoria University of Wellington, New Zealand. He has a PhD in anthropology (Toronto), and an MS in STS (RPI). Previously, he was assistant professor of anthropology, University of Tsukuba, Japan. His work is in the anthropology and history of technology. Grant has written about human-machine interfaces and the history of cybernetics in Japan, postcolonial anthropology, translation, and the anthropology of ethics in Japanese and English.

Website
Twitter

Associate Editor
Sujatha Raman
Canberra, Australia

Sujatha Raman is associate professor and director of research at CPAS, Australian National University. Trained in science and technology studies (STS), she is exploring the contribution that science communication research and practice can make to science, technology and innovation in the public good. Her recent publications include Science and the Politics of Openness (co-edited, Manchester University Press, 2018) and papers in Palgrave Communications, GeoForum, Sociologia Ruralis, Environmental Science and Policy, Environmental Communication, Progress in Development Studies and Journal of Rural Studies.

Website
Twitter

Editorial Board

We can list the full editorial Board here with no images.

Kim Fortun (country)

and so on.

Founding Board

The founding editorial team includes:

Daniel Kleinmann (country)
Katie Vann (country)